

What will our community be like in 2030?

Planning our future. Together.

How can we preserve what we love most about living here? What can we improve? Will our children have the same quality of life we did? What is our responsibility to the future?

The District of North Vancouver has launched an eighteen-month planning and engagement effort on these questions (and others). The goal is to update the Official Community Plan, which shapes policies for land use, transportation, housing, climate change, and other social, environmental and economic areas.

Be part of the dialogue, from the start. Your input will create a stronger identity for the District, and will help shape the future.
