LETTER: Will new council continue trend?

Dear Editor:

More logic and common sense. .. in the near future?

I attended two all candidates meetings for the District of North Vancouver council.

Now we know our representatives. Would it be a different group if much more than 23 per cent of citizens came to vote? Hard to say. On the last meeting, (Nov. 12), due to a large number of people wanting to ask questions, I was not selected. I would have asked all candidates: Who of you will try to stop present developers' craziness? The answer would interest me greatly.

Why do we have such horrific traffic here in the last year or two? You can read that apartment highrises will have this and that plus 175 flats.

No big deal, you might say. But, how many such big buildings have been built recently? Simple addition can't be fooled.

Whether the trend will continue or not, will depend on this old/new council.

Well, big is not always best, not even the bigger the better.

And that it is not only the game of words, as we can see almost daily.
